SATURDAY MORNING PANELS

CO-SPONSORED WITH
THE CENTER FOR RELIGION AND PSYCHOTHERAPY OF CHICAGO

CHRONIC ILLNESS: MISFORTUNE OR OPPORTUNITY?

CO-SPONSORED WITH THE INSTITUTE FOR CLINICAL SOCIAL WORK

At one time, psychoanalysis confronted problems that appeared to be more or less resolvable. Today, however, it faces complex issues that seem to question rather than accommodate such a viewpoint. Taking this dilemma as its cue, the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis has created two Saturday morning panels designed to examine ongoing struggles as they apply to difficult clinical issues. These issues resist the concept of resolution and instead represent life-long battles that seem to challenge and defy our desire for closure.

PANEL ONE

RELIGION AND PSYCHOTHERAPY: COLLABORATION OR CONFLICT?

*CO-SPONSORED WITH
THE CENTER FOR RELIGION AND PSYCHOTHERAPY OF CHICAGO*

Saturday, February 9, 2008
9:00 am to Noon

This panel will discuss how and why religion moved into the realm of psychotherapy from a historical point of view. It will also examine two competing perspectives: the viewpoint that religion and psychotherapy are two separate and distinct enterprises that should not intermingle, and the viewpoint that religion and psychotherapy should be, and in many respects have been, integrated.
